

Highlights: Cabinets and Countertops

America's kitchen fixation has cooked up big business for cabinets and countertops, which usually account for about half the cost of a kitchen remodel. Chicago Consumers' Checkbook (www.checkbook.org) priced cabinets and countertops at local independent and big-box retailers and guides homeowners through the process of planning a kitchen remodel and keeping costs down. Highlights from Checkbook's report:

Getting Started

- Ask yourself: What do you like or dislike about your current kitchen? How do you plan to use the kitchen—a center of family activities; a place to eat most or all meals; for gourmet-level cooking? Do you want to make structural changes? Replace appliances? How much are you willing to spend?
- Strongly consider professional design help: Pros (usually a kitchen designer or architect) know how to make kitchens look better, function more efficiently, and cost less. With their expertise, you can avoid mishaps. And if suppliers or installers mess up, a pro has more leverage to push for making it right.
- If you decide to hire a pro, interview several. When meeting with designers, assess their taste and how easy it is to communicate with them. A meeting in your existing kitchen is likely to hatch the best ideas.
- When you find a promising candidate, ask for references, and if possible, tour a kitchen that the designer has recently done and thinks would match your taste.
- Checkbook recommends arrangements that let you compare prices and buy from a supplier other than the designer if the price is right. For this freedom, it's worth paying a design fee.

Choosing Cabinets (and Avoiding High Prices)

- You will have to decide on the number, types, and sizes of cabinets; type of wood; door style; finish; knobs; and accessories. The websites of major manufacturers display types, styles, and finishes; provide assistance with creating plans; and answer many of your questions. These sites are great resources.
- Get several suppliers to bid on your job. Checkbook's undercover shoppers collected bids for 16 specific KraftMaid cabinets and found prices ranging from $5,890 to $9,224.
- Home Depot and Lowe's did not have the lowest prices. In fact, the price quoted by Lowe's was the highest.
- If new cabinets would bust your budget, painting or re-facing existing cabinets is a good option if you are OK with your layout and your cabinets are well-constructed and in good condition under the surface.

Comparing Countertop Costs

- Countertop materials range from wood to plastics to metal to stone, and for each you can save plenty by shopping for the best price.
- To supply and install a Black Galaxy granite countertop, using the same design, Checkbook's shoppers got bids from $2,088 to $4,334.
- Ask retailers about warranties. Because manufactured counter materials are brand-name and engineered, they usually come with a guarantee against chips, scratching, or warping for 10 to 20 years. Granite and natural stones are usually ineligible for such warranties.
- Most vendors can have your new countertops installed within 10 days, unless your material is out of stock. Be sure your designer or countertop seller comes to measure to prevent cutting mistakes.
